The Existential Adventures of Crazy Man and the Dog, Sidestepper

Episode 104: The Dolphin of Diamonds

“Stop you two!” screamed a dolphin tied to the moment by a strange metallic apparatus. The center of its body had been gouged out and replaced by two giant sparkling diamonds. “I,” said the dolphin, “am the Dolphin of Diamonds and you will take a moment from your wanderings to admire me.”

Episode 108: Becoming

It was a quiet non-stormy day on the path of adventure and new meanings when Crazy Man and the dog, Sidestepper, passed by a dilapidated and thoroughly graffiti-drenched house rotting away beside the path.

“I sure wouldn’t want to be that house,” said the dog, Sidestepper.

Crazy Man studied the house for a few minutes, maybe a few hours, and came to a solid decision based on his observations and past experience (most of which he couldn’t remember) and said, “Nope.”

Episode 103: Being Re-born

In spite of another glorious sunny day on the path of adventure and new meanings, a sort-of man and a kind-of dog were bored, motherless and starving so they screamed their disenchantment with life and the universe and it went something like this...

“OOOOOOOOOooooOOOOOOOOO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Episode 111: Duck Training Camp

Before them, stretching as far as they could see up river and down river, were thousands of ducks, all of them roiled up about something. Some were quacking orders at the others. Some swam in very un-duck-like formations reminiscent of WW II bombing runs. Others swam in columns like Roman legions and shot their heads forward in unison every five seconds as though stabbing some invisible enemy with their beaks.

Episode 106: The White Feather

“Look what I found!” said Crazy Man to the dog, Sidestepper.

Crazy Man stood facing down at something lying before him on the path of adventure and new meanings. The dog, Sidestepper, sidestepped up beside him and looked down. There on the path was the whitest feather either of them had ever seen. A low-flying wind rippled its shaft and quill, causing its vane to giggle.

Episode 112: Setting Brains on Fire

I sat down with a calculator one night and figured it out: Approximately 2,544,765,234,234.03 brilliant ideas have been lost because the people who had then didn't write them down fast enough and the vast majority of them didn't live long enough to have the idea again and spent the remainder of their lives trying to remember what it was.

Episode 102: Wired

Some say there should be limits to free thought...that freedom of thought is unthinkable because it's...well...free. And who makes money off free thought? Who cares to even listen to, read or fantasize thoughts that come without a price that can be artificially discounted when there are so many thoughts that can be conceived for the sole purpose of discounting them?

If you think about this long enough, you'll go crazy.

Episode 107: Danger Falling Ice

The falling ice snorted a puny glint of light snort and said, “I’ve been waiting for the perfect kill. It’s that spot, right beside you, to your right. That’s the spot. That’s where I have it all planned. Someone walks into that spot...my killing spot...and I fall onto their head and voila! Dead pedestrian. But nobody’s walked on that spot all winter...all spring...all summer. So, could you please move a little to the right.”

The Existential Adventures of Crazy Man and the Dog, Sidestepper

Episode 117: High

If there's one thing the path of adventure and new meanings never lacks...it's surprises, and today the surprise was something out of the normal for our two journeyers. Today, the path led up, up and up beyond the highest building, beyond the highest hippie still living in the 60s, beyond the highest fence surrounding the house containing the kitchen that Crazy Man might have, beyond the source of all misery and mayhem and beyond that point where no dog or man has gone before without a plane, rocket or large balloon. That high.

The Existential Adventures of Crazy Man and the Dog, Sidestepper

Episode 101: Big

When it's possible to destroy the world a hundred times over, it's impossible not to try. It's in our nature. We push ourselves to the brink and struggle to survive. We tell ourselves that this makes us stronger, this is evolution...and we adapt mostly from the worst, seldom from the best.

But Crazy Man and the dog, Sidestepper, never dwelled on these things because they were existentially chill in an angst sort of way. Instead...
